

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a component comprised of a plastic composite and an inner substrate. One example is a cellulosic-filled plastic composite through which a perforated metal sheet extends. The substrate may provide structural benefits such as reduction in creep and improved fastener retention.